Effect of interleukin-2 on the in vitro proliferation of activated rat lymphocytes. The effect of interleukin-2 (IL-2) on the in vitro proliferation of activated rat lymphocytes was studied. Peritoneal cells from normal adult rats were cultured with concanavalin A (Con A) and the growth of lymphocytes was measured by <sup>3</sup>H-thymidine uptake. IL-2 was prepared by a baculovirus expression system and assayed by the generation of cytotoxic T-cell clones from MLC-responding cells. Addition of a suboptimal amount of Con A (2.5 micrograms/ml) activated the proliferation of rat lymphocytes in a two-stage pattern. The addition of IL-2 (5-100 U/ml) to the Con A (2.5 micrograms/ml) culture resulted in a dose-dependent decrease in cell proliferation that was not due to an inhibitory effect on thymidine uptake. The number of lymphocytes cultured with IL-2 was lower than that without IL-2, but the kinetics of cell division was not affected by the addition of IL-2. A 10-fold increase in IL-2 concentration resulted in a decrease in the number of lymphocytes cultured. IL-2 did not inhibit mitogen-induced proliferation of lymphocytes derived from spleen or lymph nodes. In addition, IL-2 failed to activate th
